

CURTIS FOR $10,000 LIGHT

HARVARD AVIATION FIELD, QUANTUM, Sept. 10.
More than 100,000 people gathered here inside and outside the Aviation Field this afternoon to witness the wonderful flights of the birds on this the seventh day of the Harvard-Boston Aero meet.

The sun was shining brightly and the wind had dropped so that it was faultless aviation weather when the time was reached for the beginning of the professional program at 2 o'clock. At this time the contest committee had granted Glen H. Curtiss permission to make the flight to Boston Light, and Mr. Curtiss, with his new and powerful motor in readiness, was expected to appear to make the trial at any time.

CURTIS READY FOR LONG FLIGHT.

"An early start is what the flight" said Mr. Curtiss. "I am waiting for the wind to blow as soon as I think it is favorable. I shall be off."

The flight was made at 10:30 a. m. by the Curtiss biplane, the first of the most powerful biplanes to take to the air since the Curtiss biplane was first flown. The flight was made at 10:30 a. m. by the Curtiss biplane, the first of the most powerful biplanes to take to the air since the Curtiss biplane was first flown.

"This is a great day for flying," said Charles J. Child, chairman of the contest committee. "You saw some great sport before evening. The aviators are ready to take part in most of the events on the program."

"Already there have been six entries for the specially arranged long flying from an altitude of 1,500 feet. The entries are those of Graham-White, Brookline, Johnson, Willard, Curtis and Willard. The flight will be made at 10:30 a. m. by the Curtiss biplane, the first of the most powerful biplanes to take to the air since the Curtiss biplane was first flown."

To Receive Boston Trophy.

The one who is the most successful of all the contestants will receive the Boston Trophy. The second place aviator will receive the John Hay Hammond Trophy.

Graham-White's famous biplane, which was damaged considerably when it landed in a pool of water late yesterday afternoon, is

By Herriman

The talented announcement is made at Lord Dillon, 1883, the world's trotting queen, will be sent next spring to the east of The Harvester, 200, the world's fastest trotting station.

It is certain that the progeny of these famous trotters will create a greater interest than any colt or filly could in the future, and the coming of a world's champion trotter will not be the least of the burdens of the country to expect.

It is the result of the action of the champion blood lines, the temperament, the information and the great speed of the horse on the track, and The Harvester should be in the list of one of the greatest American trotters.

PLAYER BREAKS NOSE.

KARTON, Pa., Sept. 10.—Crane of Philadelphia, who has been playing for several days in the city, broke his nose on the ground in football practice.
